As part of the onshore works for the Vanguard West, East and Boreas Offshore Wind Farms, archaeological investigations have been carried out along the cable route. These works uncovered a range of unexpected and fascinating discoveries, including the remains of a Roman villa.

This free public exhibition at Gressenhall explores why the archaeology was undertaken, what was found and what it reveals about life in Norfolk through the ages. Visitors can see artefacts on display and step inside a virtual reconstruction of the Roman villa using an interactive augmented reality experience, offering a rare opportunity to connect past and present.
